

Journal of Robotics and Mechatronics

Call for Special Issue Proposals

JRM calls for proposals for forthcoming special issues of the journal. Special issues feature papers under a certain theme and publish them in a single issue. Although special issues are usually planned by the JRM Editorial Committee, the journal has decided to solicit proposals to incorporate cutting-edge breakthroughs and broaden the journal's perspective.

If you would like to plan and edit a special issue as a guest editor at JRM, please fill the proposal application form on the next page and send it to JRM Editorial Office via email (robot@fujipress.jp). The Editorial Committee will examine the proposal and inform you of the committee's decision.

Special Issue and Guest editor

[Content]

Each special issue consists of 5 or more original papers. In addition to research papers, a review paper or development reports can be included. For the acceptable manuscript type, see Instruction to Authors.

[Instruction to Authors]

JRM is published on the 20th of every even-numbered month, six times a year, and your special issue will appear in one of them.

[Qualifications]

- Have deep specialized knowledge of robotics or mechatronics.
(It is preferable to have a Ph.D. or equivalent.)
- Have research experience at an academic research institute.

[Role]

- Guest editor invites authors to collect original papers that fit the special issue theme.
- For papers submitted to a special issue, the guest editor selects reviewers and manages the review process.
- Assigning reviewers is done in collaboration with the Editorial Committee.
- Usually, the number of guest editors is 1 to 5.
- For criteria and methods of review and decision on acceptance, the rules specified by Editorial Committee are followed.

General remarks about JRM

<Publication charge>

After a paper is published, the author is required to pay a specific publication charge. For details, see the web page of JRM: <https://www.fujipress.jp/jrm/rb-authors/>

<Open access>

Full-text PDF of papers published in JRM is all released for free of charge. Regarding online publication, other than the publication charge, there is no additional charge required.
